Finding Feeds:

The following is a collection of tools you can use to find RSS feeds. Because it’s easy to unsubscribe to feeds, you can readily experiment with unfamiliar sources. Many publishers are beginning to offer RSS feeds for tables of contents.

The orange XML, or RSS icon, is the standard symbol on web pages that have a corresponding RSS feed. One way to start is to go through your bookmarks and see which sites have added an RSS feed.

Bloglines

The Directory at Bloglines.com offers a search feature.

Daypop

Daypop.com searches "News Sites and Weblogs for Current Events and Breaking News". You can get any search result in RSS by adding &o=rss to the end of the URL of your search results. This might be best for a hot topic, like "Iran".

feedfinder.feedster.com

http://blogsearch.google.com/ Searching for feeds is of course like searching for relevant web sites. These search engines will find some authoritative sources. New feeds are coming up all the time, so you can actually subscribe to the results from a search.

Mail-Archive

www.mail-archive.com/ If you get a lot of email from mailing lists hosted at Mail-Archive, you're in luck. With over 2500 different lists available, simply find the archive page for the discussion in question and add maillist.rdf www.newsisfree.com provides a number of custom RSS feeds from sites that don't produce their own.

NewsisFree

Further Reading